

LITERATURE CITED

- Bart, J., R. A. Stehn, J. A. Herrick, N. A. Heaslip, T. A. Bookhout, and J. R. Stenzel. 1984. Survey methods for breeding Yellow Rails. J. Wildl. Manage. 48: 1382-1386.
- Bookhout, T. A. 1995. Yellow Rail (Coturnicops noveboracensis). In The Birds of North America, No. 139 (A. Poole and F. Gill, eds.). The Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia, and the American Ornithologists' Union, Washington, D.C.
- Bookhout, T. A., and J. R. Stenzel. 1987. Habitat and movements of breeding Yellow Rails. Wilson Bull. 99: 441-447.
- Bureau of Land Management. 1998. Fourmile Property Grazing Environmental Assessment, EA #OR-014-96-03. Klamath Falls R. A., Lakeview District, OR.
- Contreras, A. 1993. The Yellow Rail in Oregon. Oregon Birds 19: 40-44.
- Graff, P. 1998. Preliminary habitat survey for Yellow Rails and Spotted Frogs at Big Marsh, Deschutes National Forest. Unpublished report.
- Griffey, W. E. 1944. First Oregon nest of Yellow Rail. Murrelet 27: 29.
- Grinnell, J., and A. H. Miller. 1944. Distribution of the birds of California. Cooper Ornith. Soc., Pac. Coast Avifauna 27.
- Harris, S. 1996. Northwestern California Birds, 2nd ed. Humboldt State Univ., Arcata, CA.
- McCaskie, G., P. DeBenedictis, R. Erickson, and J. Morlan. 1980. Birds of northern California, an annotated field list. Second ed. Golden Gate Audubon Soc., Berkeley, CA.
- National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. 1998. Climatological data annual summary, Oregon, 1997. Vol. 103 (13).
- Oregon Climate Service. 1999. 1998 calendar year precipitation totals. Internet web site data.
- Oregon Natural Heritage Program. 1995. Rare, threatened, and endangered plants and animals of Oregon. Oregon Natural Heritage Program, Portland, Oregon. 84 pp.
- Popper, K. and M. Stern. 1996. Breeding ecology of Yellow Rails at Jack Spring and Mares Egg Spring, Klamath Co., Oregon, 1995 - 1996. Unpubl. report to Winema National Forest, Klamath Falls Resource Area, and Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife.
- Popper, K. and M. Stern. 1997. Breeding ecology of Yellow Rails at Fourmile Creek/Jack Spring and Mares Egg Spring, Klamath Co., Oregon, 1997. Unpubl. report to Winema National Forest, Klamath Falls Resource Area, and Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife.
- Peabody, P. B. 1922. Haunts and breeding habits of the Yellow Rail Coturnicops noveboracensis. J. Mus. Comp. Oology 2: 33-44.
- Robert, M. and P. Laporte. 1997. Field techniques for studying breeding Yellow Rails. J. Field Ornithol. 68(1): 56-63.
- Robert, M., P. Laporte, and F. Shaffer. 1995. Plan d'action pour le rétablissement du râle jaune (Coturnicops noveboracensis) au Québec. Service canadien de la faune, Sainte-Foy, Quebec. 38 pp.

Rogers, T. H. 1982. Northern Rocky Mountain-Intermountain Region. American Birds 36(6): 999.

Stalheim, P. S. 1974. Behavior and ecology of the Yellow Rail (Coturnicops noveboracensis). M. S. Thesis, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis.

Stern, M. A., J. F. Morawski, and G. A. Rosenberg. 1993. Rediscovery and status of a disjunct population of breeding Yellow Rails in southern Oregon. Condor 95: 1024-1027.

Walkinshaw, L. H. 1939. The Yellow Rail in Michigan. Auk 56: 227-237.